

黄浦区 2024 学年度第一学期高三年级期终调研测试

英语试卷

2024 年 12 月

(完卷时间：105 分钟 满分：115 分)

第 I 卷 (共 75 分)

I. Grammar and Vocabulary

Section A

Directions: After reading the passage below, fill in the blanks to make the passages coherent and grammatically correct. For the blanks with a given word, fill in each blank with the proper form of the given word; for the other blanks, use one word that best fits each blank.

The Ancient Philosophy Behind The Sign

The Sign, a 28-minute episode of the kids TV show has been hotly anticipated – and its story is a deep reflection on change.

The much-loved Australian cartoon about Bluey, a seven-year-old blue dog has been a worldwide phenomenon since it (1) was launched (launch) back in 2018. Alongside more genuinely laugh-out-loud moments than in most high-time comedies, it contains more serious elements too, such as brief introductions of parenting situations (2) that/which will be painfully familiar to any guardians or caregivers, as well as inferences to fateful life events (3) like death and marriage. It's exploring an adult world with the joyous, surreal excitement of childhood.

(4) what viewers won't have predicted will be how much this episode draws from Taoist philosophy. It is an ancient Chinese belief system based on trying (5) to exist (exist) in harmony with the universe. When Bluey sadly tells her classmates she's moving away, her teacher Calypso reads a story (6) called (call) The Farmer. The story follows a series of events happening, and each time, the neighbours tell the farmer that it's "good luck" or "bad luck". Every time, the farmer simply replies to each situation, "We'll see". "Is it a happy or sad ending?" asks Bluey afterwards. "Both," says Calypso. "I don't understand," says Bluey. "Everything will work out the way that (7) it is supposed to, Bluey," she replies.

The story is actually an old tale that first originated in the Huainanzi, an ancient Chinese text (8) dating (date) back to 139 BC, and it reminds people that we have no control or no real way of knowing whether events that happen to us (9) are (be) "good" or "bad". (10) As long as we are open to change and trust that things will work out for the best, we are sure to make it.

Section B

Directions: Complete the following passage by using the words in the box. Each word can only be used once. Note that there is one word more than you need.

A. clarity	B. enriching	C. ideally	D. recharge	E. refreshed	F. schedule
G. selfish	H. socially	I. strike	J. tolerate	K. varying

How to Get the Most Out of Alone Time

Solitude is a state of being alone or away from others. It is distinct from loneliness, a feeling of emptiness or sadness arising from a perceived lack of desired connection with others. While we think of loneliness as a negative emotional state, solitude can be a positive and 11 B experience.

As social creatures, we are conditioned to live in groups and seek approval and belonging. If we spend too much time alone, we can become 12 H awkward, making it even harder to connect with others and get feedback from those around us. If you cannot be alone, you may stay in situations or make life choices that aren't good for you in the long run, mainly because you can't 13 J being alone while transitioning to a better situation.

Consider solitude a time for self-reflection, relaxation, creativity, and personal growth. It can allow you to focus on your thoughts and feelings, gain 14 A on personal challenges, and develop a deeper understanding of yourself. Solitude can also be a way to 15 D and find peace amid the demands and distractions of modern life.

It's essential to 16 I a balance between solitude and social interaction. Different individuals have 17 K needs for solitude, and finding the right amount that matches your well-being is essential for leading a fulfilling life. You'd better 18 F daily time for solitude. Plan some time to be with yourself daily to enjoy the benefits of solitude. For instance, at lunchtime, go for a walk by yourself and come back 19 E. Be aware of self-judgments about taking time for yourself. Wanting to be alone can be seen as 20 G or anti-social; you should think about others and do things for them instead. Kindly challenge these self-judgments and respond to them with positive statements, like that taking time for oneself is essential for self-care and mental health.

II. Reading Comprehension

Section A

Directions: For each blank in the following passages there are four words or phrases marked A, B, C and D. Fill in each blank with the word or phrase that best fits the context.

Our drive to seek out happiness is a muscle that we can exercise and develop. Almost anyone can learn to develop their reward sensitivity by 21 themselves to notice and experience their positive emotions.

To raise your reward sensitivity, begin by planning one activity per day that will make you happy or give you a sense of 22. It can be as small as treating yourself to a favorite snack or reading a few pages of a novel. This will make you less likely to 23 positive experiences. After you've enjoyed that 24 moment, close your eyes and recount out loud where and when you experienced the greatest joy. The idea isn't just to remember how you felt, but to enhance and re-experience it, thus 25 your memory of them, and increasing your motivation to seek them out going forward.

Here are some other adjustments you can make to develop a positive mind-set.

Expand your joy 26: Research suggests that finding more words to describe positive emotions can prove and increase them. When reflecting on how something made you feel, try to be 27, using words like calm, overjoyed, delighted, inspired beyond fine, good or great.

Share your highlight reel(高光时刻): 28 what made you happiest can make you feel better. Spread that happiness to another person — and also strengthen a bond.

Find bright sides: With practice, it's possible to 29 the positives hidden in things that we might first see as negative. For example, if you invited co-workers to get together and only one person showed up, you could easily view that as a(n) 30. But the bright side would be that you got to know that one person better.

Forecast future wins: If you're tight scheduled, pick an event that's approaching and think of the best possible 31. If you're tired, 32 smiling at your friend across the room, feeling proud. Using imagery can encourage motivation and get you ready for more 33 experiences.

Keep in mind, too, that it's normal to feel __34__ with pleasurable feelings sometimes, particularly if you experience depression and anxiety. Worrying can make you feel like you're ready to respond to threats — but by constantly __35__ disaster, we miss the happiness in front of us right now. Sometimes we need to behave like happy people if we actually want to be happy.

- | | | | |
|-------------------------|---------------------|-----------------|-------------------|
| D 21. A. attracting | B. demonstrating | C. entertaining | D. training |
| A 22. A. accomplishment | B. belonging | C. identity | D. responsibility |
| B 23. A. broaden | B. postpone | C. provide | D. share |
| B 24. A. critical | B. daily | C. rare | D. spare |
| D 25. A. recalling | B. recovering | C. searching | D. strengthening |
| D 26. A. reflection | B. selection | C. trial | D. vocabulary |
| C 27. A. brief | B. creative | C. precise | D. secure |
| A 28. A. Broadcasting | B. Choosing | C. Defining | D. Wondering |
| D 29. A. cover | B. divide | C. teach | D. notice |
| A 30. A. failure | B. opportunity | C. reward | D. surprise |
| B 31. A. initiative | B. outcome | C. prize | D. solution |
| B 32. A. avoid | B. imagine | C. practice | D. try |
| B 33. A. direct | B. inspiring | C. sensory | D. shared |
| D 34. A. content | B. distracted | C. easy | D. uncomfortable |
| D 35. A. ending in | B. guarding against | C. heading for | D. preparing for |

Section B

Directions: Read the following three passages. Each passage is followed by several questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. Choose the one that fits best according to the information given in the passage you have read.

(A)

How much ongoing joy can you get from something that weighs eight ounces(盎司)? For Simon Spichak, it's a lot, thanks to a hedgehog that fits in his hand.

Mr. Spichak, a 29-year-old science writer who lives in Toronto, bought his new partner in May 2023 for $280 and named it Goober. He has spent an additional $200 on food, a wheel, bedding and toys, as well as $150 in their first year together to visit a veterinarian(兽医).

hedgehog

Goober has improved Mr. Spichak's life in small and big ways, providing him with entertaining material to post to his social media accounts and helping to introduce him to some of his neighbors when he takes Goober around his block, where they're met with delighted curiosity. "There are lots of people walking by from the neighborhood who start conversations because of the hedgehog," Mr. Spichak said.

This is not an individual case.

coffee pot

Ritesh Seth, a human resources specialist in Columbia, Md., bought a solid brass, Italian-made coffee pot for $400, and said it had helped him expand his network at his co-working space. "Other business enterprises and start-ups who work out of the office space have noticed my coffee pot and out of curiosity come over to chat," Mr. Seth, 38, said. "Usually, after the polite introductions, we discuss what product or project we are working on, find common business challenges, refer potential prospects and sometimes talk about sports.”

Millennials (born from 1981 to 1996) and Generation Z (born from 1997 to 2012) are more likely than older generations to make spending on nonessential purchases a priority, according to a study published last year by Intuit. The study suggested that this was because younger generations placed a high value on personal growth and mental happiness. While gym memberships or self-help books may be more obvious purchases for improving lives, less typical options, even unusual ones, can make a lasting difference by helping people find happiness and connect to new communities.

36. What did Goober bring to Simon?

- A. It inspired him to pursue a science writing career.
- B. It helped him save money on veterinary expenses.
- C. It enriched his social media and neighborhood connections.
- D. It gained him fame by achieving recognition in the community.

37. With the coffee pot as _____, Ritesh expanded his network at his co-working space.

- A. a conversation starter
- B. a marketable product
- C. a pilot project
- D. a technical challenge

38. Compared with older generations, Millennials and Generation Z _____.

- A. spend more time on gym memberships and self-help books
- B. prefer to spend on non-essential items for self-growth and emotional joy
- C. favour financial security over personal development and mental happiness
- D. show less interest in connecting to new communities through unique items

39. Which of the following is the best title for this passage?

- A. Business-Generation Tools
- B. Career-Pursuit Choices
- C. Community-Service Pets
- D. Life-Improvement Purchases

(B)

Chapter 1 What is critical thinking?

Learning outcomes

This chapter gives you opportunities to:

- ✓ understand what critical thinking is
- ✓ find out about the early roots and later developments of critical thinking
- ✓ recognize some of the benefits associated with critical thinking skills
- ✓ recognize the personal qualities connected to critical thinking
- ✓ recognize barriers to the development of good critical thinking skills
- ✓ assess your current understanding of critical thinking and identify your priorities for improvement

Introduction

This chapter provides a general introduction to critical thinking. It examines what is meant by “critical thinking”, the skills associated with it, and the barriers that can slow down effective development of critical approaches. Many people can find it difficult to order their thoughts in a logical, consistent and reasoned way. This book starts from the idea that skills in reasoning can be developed through a better understanding of what critical thinking involves, and by practice.

Critical thinking is a cognitive activity connected to using the mind. Learning to think in critically analytical and evaluative ways means using mental processes such as attention (concentrating on specific details and information), categorization (the process of organizing information into categories based on shared characteristics), selection (selecting relevant information), and judgement (the ability to assess and form well-reasoned conclusions or opinions based on available evidence). However, many people who have the potential to develop more effective critical thinking can be prevented from doing so for a variety of reasons apart from a lack of ability. In particular, personal and emotional, or “affective”, reasons can create barriers.

You are invited to consider, in this chapter, how far such barriers could be affecting your own thinking abilities and how you will manage them.

40. According to the learning outcomes, which of the following topics is most likely to be included in Chapter 1?

- A. Significant works in critical thinking
- B. Teaching strategies for critical thinking
- C. Critical thinking: individual or collective?
- D. Critical thinking: Where does it come from?

41. What can a reader learn in this chapter?

- A. How a mental process works and what role it plays in making logical reasoning.
- B. What defines cognitive activity and how emotions can shape critical thinking skills.
- C. Why individuals possess varying abilities to think critically and how to assess them.
- D. What is critical thinking and how it can be developed through understanding and practice.

42. Which of the following examples best illustrates the mental process of categorization?

- A. A student chooses articles that are related to his topic from a large database.
- B. A student focuses on the main points the teacher emphasizes in a physics class.
- C. A student sorts notes by grouping them according to different historical periods.
- D. A student decides which arguments to include in his essay after weighing the evidence.

(C)

①I read “Middlemarch” in college. None in my class got it. Why would Dorothea make such a decision on her marriage? “Trust me, you’ll read this book again when you’re forty, and you’ll say, ‘Oh, I see!’” our professor said.

②Yet there’s a theory behind the assignment of “Middlemarch”: knowledge acquired too early gets stored away. Patterns of thinking established now will be retraced later; ideas encountered first in art will prepare us for the rest of life. This sounds unclear, until you reflect on the fact that you take a class in law school today only to argue a complicated case years later. Knowledge must often molder in our mental warehouses for decades until we figure out what to do with it.

③ Leslie Valiant, a distinguished computer scientist, calls our ability to learn over the long term

“educability”. In his new book, “The Importance of Being Educable,” he argues that it’s key to our success. When we think about what makes our minds special, we tend to focus on intelligence. But if we want to grasp reality in all its complexity, Valiant writes, then “cleverness is not enough.” We need to build comprehensive and flexible theories about the world — theories that will serve us in new, unanticipated, and strange circumstances — and we do that by gathering diverse kinds of knowledge, often in a slow, additive, accidental way, and knitting them together. Through this process, we acquire systems of beliefs that are broader and richer than the ones we can create through direct personal experience.

④ An educable mind, he writes, can learn from books, lectures, conversations, experiences, — from anything, really — and notice when relevant aspects of almost forgotten knowledge reveal themselves. We admire aspects of someone’s educability when we say that they are a quick study, but what really makes them educable is that they apply insights “for purposes not foreseen at the time of the study”. When people strike us as particularly well-educated, this might mean that they have had lots of school, but it could also mean that they’re exceptionally educable, with the ability to take good advantage of whatever educational opportunities arise, whether formal or informal.

⑤ Valiant thinks it might be useful to promote educability as an ideal. We could try to figure out how to measure and teach it in schools, or to encourage it in adults; at a time when rapid technological change means there’s always more to learn, we might seek to create a more educable society in general.

43. The underlined word “molder” (paragraph 2) is closest in meaning to “_____”.

- A. become out-of-date
- B. keep practical
- C. remain inactive
- D. stay safe

44. Which of the following mind map correctly illustrate the relationship among knowledge, theory and beliefs?

A.

B.

C.

D.

45. What can be inferred from paragraph 4?

- A. True educability lies in presenting insights for unforeseen purposes.
- B. A quick learner overestimates the value of learning from all sources.
- C. Schooling ensures that an educable mind can seize all learning opportunities.
- D. An educable mind pursues learning even without an immediate goal in mind.

46. The passage is intended to _____.

- A. introduce a book on educability
- B. maximize the benefits of educability
- C. inspire people to create an educable society
- D. recommend a distinguished computer scientist

Section C

Directions: Read the following passage. Fill in each blank with a proper sentence given in the box. Each sentence can be used only once. Note that there are two more sentences than you need.

- A. What happens if you lose cell-phone service?
- B. The point is to be able to see the views and smell the flowers.
- C. But the most essential equipment is footwear because your feet are literally your foundation.
- D. Spending time in nature and having experiences that inspire amazement can lower stress and anxiety.
- E. If the idea of breaking a sweat on the tracks sounds appealing but you're not sure how to start, we've got you covered.
- F. It can be as simple as heading out the door and walking for 40 minutes to an hour to build up strength and endurance.

Hiking: How to Get Started

Hiking, a form of exercise older than exercise itself, is so hot right now. For dedicated hikers, hiking offers freedom and perspective. But for those of us who haven't spent serious time outdoors since summer camp, a half-day hike can be difficult. How can you avoid getting lost or injured? Do you really need special hiking shoes? ____47____

If you're relatively active, you're probably already training just by going for walks. ____48____ To train for sharper land, walk up hills or take the stairs instead of a lift.

The key to a relaxing hike is being as prepared as possible for the unknown, whether it's a sudden downpour or an injured ankle. Every hiker should bring the 10 essentials, which include food and drink, first aid supplies, a map and compass and rainwear. ____49____ You don't need to invest in special hiking shoes. You do need to wear shoes that offer firmness and protection, especially if the track is rocky, sharp or potentially muddy.

Finally, to avoid injury, don't push yourself too hard or fast through more challenging tracks. Remember: ____50____ Slow down, take in the scenery, listen to the birds, and just be present in nature.

III. Summary Writing

Directions: Read the following passage. Summarize the main idea and the main point(s) of the passage in no more than 60 words. Use your own words as far as possible.

How to Make a Good Video Resumé(简历)?

Video resumé have been around for a long time. With a well-made video resumé, you can present yourself creatively and allow a hiring manager to assess your personality, thus giving you an opportunity for interview. But how to make a good video resumé?

First, start by introducing yourself and addressing the company you are applying to. For example, "Hello InVideo, I'm John Doe". Not only does this get their attention but it makes them feel prioritized. The next thing is to address what profession you're in or desire to be in. If you're a filmmaker, you can simply state that or be creative with words and say you're a visual storyteller.

Then, talk about your passion for what you do and support it by referring to your past experiences and work. For example, building on the filmmaker's introduction, you could talk about how meeting people from around the world and sharing their stories deeply motivates you, and then you can share an experience that supports it. You can also focus on life experiences that have led you to cultivate skills - like taking a year off to travel abroad, volunteering at a shelter, or a hobby that you actively pursue. You can also speak about your special achievements and awards that will add value to your profile or you can get someone to speak on behalf of you as social proof.

At the end of the video, leave the ball in their court. However, you also need to give them a reason to call you for an interview. For example, you could end the video with this - "I have a lot more to me than I could fit in this short video and I hope you give me a chance to tell you about it over an interview".

第 II 卷（共 40 分）

IV. Translation

Directions: Translate the following sentences into English, using the words given in the brackets.

52. 这款饮料由水果和蔬菜汁混合而成，味道很好。(combination)
53. 下了一周雨后，天气变得阳光明媚，这真令人感到愉悦。(which)
54. 无论从哪个方面看，写作都是一个有百利无一害，且适用于每个普通人的技能。(apply)
55. 包括新手小白和高级玩家在内的多位受访者表示，他们热衷于攀岩是因为这项运动需要他们富有创造性地解决问题。(range)

V. Guided Writing

Directions: Write an English composition in 120-150 words according to the instructions given below in Chinese.

假设你是明启中学高三学生李明，收到年龄相仿的英国笔友 Mary 的邮件（如下），她将于下周末在家中接待来自中国的几位同龄人，但不知道该做些什么准备。请回复她的邮件，内容须包括：

- (1) 你的建议；
- (2) 你的理由。

Subject: Seeking Advice on Hosting Friends from China

Dear Li Ming,

I hope you're well! I'm reaching out because I'll be hosting a few friends from China at my home next weekend, and I don't know what preparations I should make to ensure they feel comfortable and welcome. Do you have any suggestions?

Thank you in advance for any advice you can share!

Best, Mary